At a meeting in Bryant Hall last night striking printers, developers and other employees in motion picture studios debated last night the weekly, and through vote for an armistice with the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry pending a settlement of their strike by negotiation. A suspension of hostilities seemed likely.

The Motion Picture Craftsmen in calling the strike yesterday started serious interference with the making of 15,000 feet of film weekly, and through their affiliation with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees have threatened to extend the strike throughout the country if their demands for higher wages and recognition of their union are not met.

The negotiations and meeting came as the result of a letter earlier in the day sent to the Motion Picture Craftsmen by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, in which they had offered to have conferences on condition the strike was suspended. The strike leaders claimed that when the negotiations began in the morning 2,000 men and women would out and began picketing.
